

SL-01—"Relational Stewardship"

by Sandy Lindahl

In the Relational Stewardship course, students will consider Christian models and practices for healthy relationships of various kinds, and the positive outcomes for individuals, congregations and communities. Students will consider a broad range of personal relationships ranging from God and self, family and friends to workplace and worship-place connections, and communal relationships that can bring new purpose and energy to congregations.

This course is part of the Steward Leaders Engaging God's Mission online course series. Students enrolled in Steward Leaders Engaging God's Mission courses learn principles and practices relating to stewardship and leadership through studying Scripture, exploring holistic perspectives, critiquing culture, developing healthy relationships, and achieving financial health.
